DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's election without traverse of Group IV (claim 1, drawn to a method of treating or reducing the risk of acquiring vaginal dryness) with the election of specie of a sex steroid precursor as dehydroepiandrosterone is acknowledged. Claim 1 has been examined only to the extent of applicant's species election.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Art Unit: 1617

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Utsumi et al. (U.S. Patent No. 4,005,200) in view of Blum et al. (1983) and Rodriguez (U.S. Patent No. 6,511,970 B1).

Utsumi et al. teach dehydroepiandrosterone (DHEA) has been proposed to use clinically in combination with estrogen in the treatment of various syndromes associated with climacterium. (column 1, lines 65-68).

Utsumi et al. do not teach the treatment of vaginal dryness comprising administering DHEA and further comprising selective estrogen receptor modulator (SERM) as part of a combination therapy.

Blum et al. teach that vaginal dryness is one of symptoms associated with climacterium. (abstract).

Rodriguez teaches SERM are estrogens. (column 41, lines 9-20). Rodriguez teaches the term "estrogen" and estrogen product" includes any estrogen compounds and estrogen equivalents and estrogen agonists and antagonists. (column 18, lines 14-30).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to employ DHEA in combination with SERM for the treatment of vaginal dryness because Utsumi et al. teach that the combination of DHEA and estrogen is known to have clinical use for the treatment of various syndromes associated with climacterium and that vaginal dryness is one of symptoms or syndromes associated with climacterium. One would have been motivated to employ DHEA in combination with estrogen known by Utsumi et al. for having clinical applicability in treatment of vaginal dryness one of syndromes of climacterium. With regard to combination therapy with SERM is obvious because Utsumi et al. teach that combination treatment of DHEA and estrogen in climacterium syndrome is well known and because SERM are estrogens in general as taught by Rodriguez.

For these reasons the claimed subject matter is deemed to fail to patentably distinguish over the state of the art as represented by the cited references. The claims are therefore properly rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103.

None of the claims are allowed.
